

The Magic Stone for Bo

Once upon a time a nice family had a lot of pets and a gorilla. The gorilla was hurt in the jungle, so he came to the family. The animals felt very good because the man and the woman played with them and gave them plenty of food. Kate took care of the gorilla, his name was Bo.

One day Kate had a baby. She was worried that the animals could hurt the baby, so she put all her pets and Bo into a huge cage. Kate didn't play with them any more. After a while she also forgot to feed her animals. Bo and the other pets were very upset. They began to dig a hole underneath the cage. In the middle of the hole Bo found a little and bright stone. He knew that this was a magic stone because it was shining like the sun. It could make wishes real. At the same moment he could hear the baby crying. Bo was so furious that he wished: "Please, can we pets rule all the people". On the next day his wish was real and the dog went for a walk with the people on a leash. All the pets from the zoo were free and it was a big mess. For four days it was very funny but on the fifth day it was a disaster. Because everybody did what they liked. Cars and windows were broken because the tigers and monkeys were crazy, all children shouted because they were confused and the babies were crying. Bo took the stone and wished everything back.
